

THE CAPTAIN SAID, 'IT STAYS!' 'But that is not fair,' said the First Mate, 'The owners could dismiss me.' The Captain had just logged, 'Today the First Mate is drunk.' Never before had this happened, but the entry remained. The following day the First Mate wrote in the log; 'Today the Captain is sober.' An argument followed, but in both cases the entry was correct, as well as very misleading! A half truth with essential facts left out can create more trouble than a whole lie. The political system calls it 'spin'; the Bible says it's a lie.' 'Of course I know my words were not exactly straight.' 'So they were crooked', retorted the friend. 'Not exactly,' was the answer. 'But if a line is not straight, it is crooked,' said the friend, 'and so were your words. It is better to lose with a conscience clean, than win with a trick unfair.' Any manipulation of words to get your own way is not the Jesus way for He said, 'let your yes be yes, and your no, no!'
